

Marcus Musurus and Pindar

Guillermo Galán Vioque

Their study was based on notes by the German humanist Johannes Cuno (ca. 1462–1513), one of Musurus' students in Padua, transcribed by his friend and disciple Beatus Rhenanus (1485–1547) and preserved in the manuscript Sélestat, Bibliothèque Humaniste 102, ff. 167–174. Among other entries, this codex contains a Latin translation of the first five Olympian Odes with explanatory notes in the margin and a transcription of the end of Olympian 6 (lines 96–106). Irigoin and Mondrain proved beyond doubt that Musurus was familiar with Triclinius' second recension.<sup>4</sup> This finding is relevant because it removes the main obstacle to confirming Musurus' involvement in the preparation of the editio princeps, which contains undeniable traces of Triclinius' recensions.<sup>5</sup>

In this study I review additional evidence that both confirms Musurus' knowledge of Triclinius' second recension and suggests that he also had at his disposal the first recension that comprised all the epinicians. I also tentatively identify the manuscript source that made the second recension available to Musurus. Finally, I show that Musurus also depended on the ancient Pindaric scholia, specifically, on the version that survives in Vat.gr. 1312 (B).

Before Irigoin and Mondrain's article, it was known that Musurus had only two Pindar manuscripts at his disposal, one with the so-called Vatican recension (Vat.gr. 41 [H], dated to the first quarter of the 14th century), and another with the edition of the prolific Byzantine monk and scholar Maximus Planudes

<sup>5</sup> See Tycho Mommsen, Pindari carmina (Berlin 1864) XLIII n.*; Irigoin, Histoire 399–408, and in ΦΙΛΟΦΡΟΝΗΜΑ 262; Ferreri, L'Italia 439; and Bauer, Princeton University Library Chronicle 76 (2015) 434. Musurus' involvement in the editing of the editio princeps has been discussed at length without reaching any definitive conclusion (see Julius Schück, "Aldus Manutius und seine Zeitgenossen in Italien und Deutschland," in Anhange: die Familie des Aldus bis zu ihrem Ende [Berlin 1862] 79; Elpidio Mioni, "La biblioteca greca di Marco Musuro," Archivio Veneto 93 [1972] 7; Geanakoplos, Greek Scholars 146 n.133; Sicherl, Johannes Cuno 101 n.73; Irigoin, Histoire 401 n.1; Ferreri 265–266; and Staffan Fogelmark, The Kallierges Pindar: A Study in Renaissance Greek Scholarship and Printing [Cologne 2015] I 10–11 n.16, and 367–370). For arguments against Musurus' involvement see Rudolf Menge, "De Marci Musuri Cretensis uita, studiis, ingenio narratio," in Mauricius Schmidt, Hesychii Alexandrini Lexicon (Jena 1868) V 33; Martin Sicherl in Dieter Harlfinger et al., Griechische Handschriften und Aldinen (Brunschweig 1978) 144–145; and Bauer 431–432.

(Venice, Marc.gr. IX.8 [1039] [W], transcribed by Kaisar Strategos at the beginning of the 16th century). Both bear Musurus' ex libris and contain the Olympian and Pythian Odes with ancient scholia. However, it seems that Musurus acquired these manuscripts after Aldus Manutius' edition of Pindar.<sup>6</sup>

In 2004, Annaclara Cataldi Palau brought to light that sometime between 1509 and 1516 Musurus owned one of Pindar's now lost manuscripts that later, in the 18th century, belonged to the Royal Library of Madrid (today's Spanish National Library), as noted by Juan de Iriarte (1701–1771), the first cataloguer of its Greek manuscripts and one of the most prominent Spanish intellectuals of the eighteenth century.<sup>7</sup> The first volume of his catalogue was published in 1769 (Regiae bibliothecae Matritensis codices Graeci manuscripti, Matriti: Ant. Pérez de Soto, 1769), while the second remained unpublished (Madrid, BNE 4655-4656).<sup>8</sup> From this unpublished volume (4656, ff. 343–345), one can infer that the missing manuscript belonged to Georgius Corinthius (ca. 1485–1555) and probably contained Triclinius' second edition of Pindar's Olympian Odes with scholia recentiora,<sup>9</sup> a descripversion of the Life of Pindar (Drachmann, Scholia uetera I 4–8 [probably 4, 8–6, 9, as in the appendix of Florence, Laur. 32.35 [ $Q^b$ ])], and the list of the nine lyric poets in a form found only in the appendix of  $Q^b$  (f. 89<sup>v</sup>) and in the Aldine (ff. *iiiiv–v) and Kallierges' editions (Ολύμπια, Πύθια, Νέα, Ισθμία, μετὰ ἔξηγήσεως παλαιῶς πάνυ ὀφελίμου, καὶ σχόλιων ὁμοίων, Romae: per Zachariam Calergi Cretensem, 1515, f. α ii<sup>v</sup>) (see Drachmann, Scholia, I 11, 12–13; Irigoin, Histoire 234–235 and 401).  $Q$  was used by Angelo Poliziano (1454–1494) (see Lucia Cesarini Martinelli, "Un ritrovamento polizianesco: il fascicolo perduto del commento alle Selve di Stazio," Rinascimento 22 [1982] 192–193); and may be no. 1032 in the 1495 inventory and no. 302 in Fabio Vigili's list (see Edmund B. Fryde, Greek Manuscripts in the Private Library of the Medici 1469–1510 [Aberystwyth 1996] I 341, 577–578). It is not known to have been used by Kallierges for his edition (see Folgelmark, The Kallierges Pindar I, 178 n.61). The scholia to Pind. Ol. 1 began thus: φησὶ τῶν ἄλλων στοιχείων. ἐπὶ δὲ τῇ συγκρίσει τούτῃ ἑτέρων ποιεῖ λέγων· ὁ δὲ χρυσὸς διαιρέπει καὶ διαλάμπει ἔξοχα καὶ ἔξοχως καὶ ὑπερτάτως τοῦ μεγάνορος (= schol. rec. on Ol. 1.1.10–13 [Th.]); and ended thus: πανταχοῦ εἰς τοὺς Ἐλληνας ἐν τῇ σοφίᾳ δέ[ον] οὕτως εἰπεῖν πρὸς μετοχὴν τὸν λόγον ἔτρεψε καὶ ἀντὶ τοῦ εἰπεῖν εἶναι, ὅντα εἶπεν (schol. rec. on Ol. 1.1.187.5–7 [Th.]). Undoubtedly Triclinian is the beginning of the scholia to Ol. 14.1.1–2, also reproduced by Iriarte (f. 343): Ασωπίχῳ τῷ ἀπὸ Ὁρχομενοῦ νικήσαντι τὴν οἵ' Ολυμπιάδα. ὁ λόγος πρὸς τὰς Χάριτος (see Eugenius Abel, Scholia recentia in Pindari Epinicia [Budapest 1891] 423).

<sup>9</sup> According to Iriarte (4656, f. 343), this manuscript contained the shorter

<sup>10</sup> Irigoin, in ΦΙΛΟΦΡΟΝΗΜΑ 259. This manuscript, which is absent from the catalogue of the library of George of Corinth published by David E. Pingree, "The Library of George, Count of Corinth," Studia Codicologica (Berlin 1977) 351–362, could be the same one that Erasmus borrowed from Musurus during his nine-month stay in Venice from January to September 1508, hosted by the so-called New Academy of Aldus, as he stated in an excursus to his adage "Festina lente" (Adagia II.1.1) in the 1526 Basel edition of his Adagiorum opus (pp.338–340); there he described this manuscript as a Pindarus cum accuratis commentariis (Adagiorum opus, Basileae: apud Ioannem Frobenium, 1526, 340 [Adagia II.1.1; LB II 405; ASD II 3.24; CWE 33.14]). Cataldi Palau has suggested instead that the manuscript was Paris.gr. 2709, which belonged to Gian Francesco d'Asola and was used by Kallierges for his edition (A. Cataldi Palau, Gian Francesco d'Asola e la tipografia aldina [Genoa

We also know now that the young Musurus had access to another Pindar manuscript. Recent handwriting analysis and a monogram<sup>11</sup> on the upper margin of f. 9 have revealed that, while he was still in Candia (Crete), his birthplace, shortly before his arrival in Italy in 1492,<sup>12</sup> he was one of the copyists of the manuscript El Escorial, BMon. X-IV-18 (413), which contains Pindar's Olympians Odes with Moschopulean scholia (ff. 62–123).<sup>13</sup>

Studies of Musurus' scholia to the Planudean Anthology corroborate that he may indeed have had in Padua at the beginning of the 16th century one or more copies of Triclinius' recensions. These scholia come from his lessons at the University of Padua during 1505–1506. They have remained largely unpublished in the margins of various incunables of Janus Lascaris' edition<sup>14</sup>

Bauer (Princeton University Library Chronicle 432–433) erroneously suggested that Erasmus borrowed from Musurus a copy of the Aldine edition at a later date.

These scholia expressly mention Pindar twenty times in all.<sup>16</sup> We exclude the scholium to AP 16.305.4, where a portrait of Pindar is described and Musurus adds Paus. 9.23.2–5 as a parallel,<sup>17</sup> and two indirect quotations. The first of these involves the scholia to AP 7.45.3.<sup>18</sup> Here, Musurus cites almost verbatim a paragraph from Athenaeus' Deipnosophistae (187.D3–E1), which quotes from Pindar (fr.76.2 M.), AP 7.45, and a fictitious Delphic oracle (Q198 Fontenrose [P.-W. 171]). The second, in the scholium to AP 11.137.4,<sup>19</sup> quotes Eustathius on Dion. Perieg. 467.6–13 and 47–50<sup>20</sup> and mentions an otherwise unknown fragment by Pindar (fr.322 M.).<sup>21</sup> Irrelevant for tracing the manuscripts used by Musurus are also four scholia which mention Pindar but no text;<sup>22</sup> and the eight times which quote his epinicia without scholia,<sup>23</sup> although these attest to Musurus' deep <sup>16</sup> Counted only once when mentioned twice in the same scholium. Additionally, Ol. 2.7–8 is quoted in an unidentified scholium that Musurus copied at f. 2<sup>v</sup> in Va (cf. Pontani in Talking to the Text 576 n.3 and 583–585).

knowledge of Pindar as early as 1505–1506.<sup>24</sup>

More useful to us are the notes in which Musurus used without acknowledgment both ancient and Byzantine scholia on Pindar.<sup>25</sup> On one occasion, in the scholium on AP 9.287.2,<sup>26</sup> he follows the scholia uetera on Pi. O. 7.71-74, 131c, agreeing with the text of manuscripts H, Q and Firenze, BLM Plut. 32.37. This suggests that Musurus owned H around 1506, before the publication of the Aldine (see above). Musurus largely follows the scholia uetera also in his scholia to AP 9.266.3<sup>27</sup> and AP 16.13.4.<sup>28</sup>

<sup>24</sup> Musurus had already quoted Pindar twice as early as 1499 in the preface to Kallierges' edition of the Etymologicum Magnum (Venetiis: impens. Nicolai Blasti et Annae Notaras, 1499, f. Aα<sup>v</sup>, lines 17 [Pind. Ol. 6.1–3] and 34 [Ol. 1.114]), and also in his correspondence (see Fogelmark, The Kallierges Pindar I 10 n.16). On Pindar in the Renaissance before Musurus see Ralph Hexter, “Aldus, Greek, and the Shape of the Classical Corpus,” in David S. Zeidberg (ed.), Aldus Manutius and Renaissance Culture. Essays in Memory of Franklin D. Murphy (Florence 1998) 148–150; Paul Botley, Learning Greek in Western Europe, 1396–1529 (Philadelphia 2010) 108–109; Francesco Tissoni, Le Olimpiche di Pindaro nella scuola di Gaza a Ferrara (Messina 2009), and his “Pindarus,” in Greti Dinkova-Bruun et al. nudes' Anthology, AP 9.357, that prove most helpful in identifying the manuscripts used by Musurus. Once again without acknowledgement, these scholia feature almost verbatim quotations from Pindar's ancient scholia. Reference to Pindar is unsurprising, for the epigram deals with the gods and men in whose honor the most famous athletic games in ancient Greece were held, and with the nature of the prizes awarded.

Unfortunately, the marginal scholia to AP 9.357 start with line 4. Scholia to 1–3 have been preserved only on a guard folium (f. A<sup>i</sup>) of Xe,<sup>29</sup> and with minor discrepancies in Madrid, BNE gr. 4715 (164) (M) (ff. 1<sup>r-v</sup> and 45–46<sup>v</sup>), which Camillo Zanetti copied in Rome in 1552, and in its apographs by Andreas Darmarios (1540–1596). This Madrid manuscript contains Musurus' annotations without the text of the epigrams. Its copyist must have started with the scholia to line 4 present in his source<sup>30</sup> and, after finding the beginning in another incunable,<sup>31</sup> later added this material in the margins of f. 1<sup>r-v</sup> (M<sup>1</sup>) (starting with a note to AP 9.357.1: Τέσσαρές εἰσιν ἀγῶνες...); then it was copied again from f. 45 onwards (M<sup>2</sup>).<sup>32</sup> Presumably, the copyist realized that the scholia in the margin differed from those in the main body of the manuscript and a decision was made to copy them again at the end.

<sup>29</sup> This witness is missing the first line of these scholia (Τέσσαρές εἰσιν· ἀγῶν παρὰ τὸ ἄγω ... ὥχλησιν, ή). It begins with ὁ κυκλοτερῆς καὶ γωνίαν and ends on the same folium with ὁ δὲ πῆχυς πόδας ἔνα καὶ ἡμισυ. The scholia continue in the margins of f. A<sup>ii</sup> (Σέλινα πρὸς τὸν Παλαιόμονα...).

<sup>30</sup> Given their shared characteristic features, this incunable could be Pa or one with similar notes. In the scholium to AP 9.357.4, for example, both Pa and M read ἐκ Κρήτης ἀνεκομίζετο ἐν Δήλῳ μνήμην, omitting in error between the last two words ἀγῶνα ποιησαμένου τῷ Ἀπόλλωνι, καὶ τοὺς νικῶντας τῷ φοίνικι στεφανώσαντος. τοῦ δὲ φοίνικος τοῦ ἐν Δήλῳ (so also in A, copied from Pa, and V).

<sup>31</sup> This incunable has not been identified but its notes are similar to those in Xe.

Since therefore the scholia to the first lines of AP 9.357 are absent from Musurus' autograph version (Va) and its apographs (Ve, Vu, and Ca) one cannot be sure that they preserve Musurus' exact wording. However, because they come from Musurus' milieu, in all likelihood, like the scholia he himself wrote in his copy of Lascaris' edition (Va), they can be traced back to his lessons at the University of Padua.

As noted above, the author of the scholia to the Planudean Anthology added without acknowledgment numerous ancient scholia to Pindar to the scholia to AP 9.357. These closely follow the wording of the ancient Pindaric scholia. Thus, for example:<sup>33</sup>

<sup>33</sup> I have omitted instances where the influence is less clear. The manner of borrowing without acknowledgement recalls Musurus' use of Kallierges' dedication to Musurus in his own dedication to Janus Lascaris printed on the second page of his Descriptio Graeciae, ex recensione M. Musuri, Venetiis: in aedibus Aldi, et Andreeae soceri, 1516. Kallierges' dedication survives in the sole copy of his edition of Pindar (1515) in Jesus College Library, Cambridge (Call number E.4.27) (see Fogelmark, The Kallierges Pindar I 374–391). A copy of this edition not listed by Fogelmark can be found in the Library of the Seminario Mayor de San Julián (Cuenca, Spain) with callmark CU-BSC 3-N-20. It does not contain Kallierges' dedicatory letter to Musurus (the author thanks the librarian Vicente Malabia for providing a picture of the relevant page).

<sup>34</sup> Line numbers follow A. Lолос' edition, but the texts are quoted directly from Xe (f. Ai) and from M (in margine at f. 1<sup>r</sup>–v and in the main text from f. 45 onwards). For the scholia to AP 9.357.4 the text is taken from the other incunables.

<sup>36</sup> This sentence (ὁ δὲ Νεμεακὸς … ἀναιρέσει) is missing from the manuscripts of the scholia to Pindar. It seems that Kallierges added it in his edition and it was later reproduced by most of the editors (for instance, Henricus Stephanus, Pindari Olympia. Pythia. Nemea. Isthmia, [Geneuae], Oliva Pauli Stephani, 1599, 433. Abel prints a lacuna here [in Scholia vetera 349; see the same suggestion in an anonymous note in Munich, BSB gr. 492, f. 44]; and Drachmann relegates it to his apparatus criticus [in Scholia II 192]). This sentence is present in Xe (f. Ai), M<sup>1</sup> (f. 1) and M<sup>2</sup> (f. 45v), and both Musurus and Kallierges probably took it over from the same unknown source. Furthermore, Bravo, in reference only to the scholia to AP 9.357, states that this passage is “confused because it occurs in the context of demonstrating the statement that all the old games were founded for the dead”: Jorge J. Bravo III, Excavations at Nemea IV [California 2018] 133–134 n.170).

Several parallels with the peculiar readings of Vat.gr. 1312 (B) lead to the conclusion that this was also the manuscript used in the making of these scholia.<sup>41</sup> This copy was once owned by Petrus Bembus (1470–1547) and was in Venice around 1500, where it was copied at least three times<sup>42</sup> and later used extensively by his friend Zacharias Kallierges (1499–1523) for his edition of Pindar (1515).<sup>43</sup>

It is in these very scholia on AP 9.357 that we find the first traces of the scholia recentiora to Pindar. Since these include allusions to the scholia to Pindar's Pythians and Nemeans, we can infer that Musurus had access to the first Triclinian recensio that comprised all the epinicians. Consider lines 62–65:<sup>44</sup>

At the beginning of this scholium there are several telling coincidences with the Triclinian scholia recentiora to Nem. 9.20, ‘Ἄτε

<sup>41</sup> Of particular relevance are: the parallels between B and Xe, M<sup>1</sup>, and M<sup>2</sup> at line 26 τὸν Ἰσθμικὸν (τῶν Ἰσθμιονικῶν D); the presence at 92 of καὶ Εὐρυδίκης, attested only in manuscript B; the position of αὐτοῖς after ἀφηγήσατο (93), present also only in B; the omission of ἦ at 94; the wording of 95–96 κτείνουσι καὶ ἀγώνα ἐπιτάφιον ιστῶσι τριετηρικὸν, also exclusive of B; the use of ἥλατο (B) instead of ἥλατο (D) at 30 and 100; and the reading Νηρεΐδων (B) instead of κρειδῶν (D) at 101.

<sup>42</sup> Its apographs are Munich, BSB gr. 492 and 565, and Heidelberg, UB Pal.gr. 353 (see Irigoin, Histoire 367).

<sup>43</sup> See Mommsen, Pindari carmina XLIII n.*; Irigoin, Histoire 157–165, 412–420; in Les scholies métriques de Pindare (Paris 1958) 109–114; Francesco Tisconi, “Zaccaria Callieri e la Vulgata di Pindaro,” Sileno 18 (1992) 173–175; Staikos, Charta of Greek Printing 413; and Fogelmark, The Kallierges Pindar I 54 and 265–294. For the academic and personal relationship between Musurus and Kallierges see Fogelmark I 7, 10 n.16; and Giambattista D’Alessio’s review, BMCR 2017/07/27.

Φοίβῳ: ποιητικῇ ἀδείᾳ τὰ ἐν Σικυῶνι πύθια τὸν Ἀδραστὸν τεθεικέναι φησίν.<sup>45</sup> Its last sentence, on the other hand, is doubtless transcribed from the scholia recentiora to Nem. 10.82: Ἐκ δὲ Πελλάνας. ὅτι ἐν Πελλήνῃ τοῖς νικήσασιν ἀθληταῖς χλαῖνα ἐδίδοτο. ἐτελεῖτο δὲ ἐν αὐτῇ τὰ θεοξένια.<sup>46</sup>

The same occurs with lines 84–90, in which the scholia recentiora to Olymp. 3.53, lines 9–17, are reproduced word for word:

<sup>47</sup> Abel, Scholia recentia I 162–163. This scholium was edited by Kallierges in a selection of the scholia recentiora (f. λ III) that, according to Irigoin (Histoire 411–420), belonged to Triclinius' second edition. Following Abel, in some Pindar manuscripts and editions it is preceded by 'Ιστορία or similar expressions like Ιστορία ὡς ἀνετέθη (in codex z = Copenhagen, DKB GkS 1979, 4° [olim Rostgaardiensis]): ιστορία, ὅπως ἀνετέθη ἡ χρυσόκερως ἔλαφος τῇ Ἀρτέμιδι... (in μ' = Vienna, ONB gr. 219, a. 1337; and in φ' = Paris.gr. 2787). According to K. Lehrs, Die Pindarscholien. Eine kritische Untersuchung zur philologischen Quellenkunde (Leipzig 1873) 88–91, scholia with such beginnings come from Triclinius' edition.

Finally, the scholium to AP 9.230.3<sup>49</sup> confirms Musurus' use of the scholia recentiora:

ὅρθιος] ὑψηλὸς, οὐκ ἀνέμβοτος. μετενήνεκται δὲ παρὰ τὸ Ἡσιόδου· ‘μακρὸς γάρ καὶ ὅρθιος οἶμος ἐπ’ αὐτήν’. Πίνδαρος δὲ ‘ὅρθια κνωδάλα’ τοὺς ὄνους εἴρηκεν, ἥ ἀντὶ τοῦ ἀπλᾶ καὶ ἀκακα, ὡς τισιν ἥρεσε διὰ τὸ ἀφελὲς καὶ ὑπομονητικὸν τοῦ ζώου καὶ ἀκακον, ἥ μᾶλλον διὰ τὸ σπερμογόνον τῶν ζώων μορίον, διὰ τὸ συνεχῶς ὄρθιάζειν. Λάγνον γάρ τὸ ζῶον μάλιστα καὶ ἀκόλαστον.

Musurus begins by quoting almost verbatim from Hes. Op. 290–291; he then adds a reference to Pind. Pyth. 10.36, which he later quotes in his scholium to AP 6.101.1 (mentioned in n.22 above); and he ends by reworking the following Triclinian scholium to Pyth. 10.56:<sup>50</sup>

Ἐγὼ ὄρθιῶν κνωδάλων φημὶ τῶν ἀπλῶν καὶ ἀκάκων ὄνων. ἀφελῆ γάρ τὰ ζῶα ταῦτα καὶ ἀκακα, μαστιγούμενά τε καὶ ἀχθοφορεῖν ἀναγκαζόμενα. εἰ δὲ μὴ ἀνάξιον εἴη τοῦ ποιητοῦ τὸ ὄρθησόμενον ἥ μᾶλλον εἰ ἀστειευόμενος τοῦτο εἴρηκεν, ὄρθιαν ὕβριν φημὶ τὸ σπερματογόνον τῶν ζώων μόριον, διὰ τὸ συνεχῶς ὄρθιάζειν. λάγνον γάρ τὸ ζῶον μάλιστα.

From the evidence reviewed we can conclude that, while composing the scholia to the Planudean Anthology in Padua around 1506, Musurus had a copy of Pindar with the scholia uetera at his disposal. This was most likely B, since they share with it numerous unique readings. Furthermore, it is clear that he also had access to one or more copies with the Triclinian recensions, a fact that clarifies Musurus' involvement in the production of Pindar's editio princeps, as Irigoin and Mondrain had suggested. Finally, it is very likely that his manuscript with the Triclinian scholia on the Olympian Odes is the now lost one from the
